Wild wedding tour hits YVR

Manchester couple planning 30 test ceremonies around the world to find the best place to get hitched ‘I still get nervous every time,’ says the bride-to-be ▶ Lisa Gant, Live@YVR winner Jaeger Mah, centre, and Alex Pelling at the Vancouver International Airport yesterday. Gant and Pelling are holding 30 test ceremonies around the world before settling on an official wedding date and location.

A couple from Manchester, England, held a faux wedding ceremony at the Vancouver airport yesterday as part of their two-year trip around the world to find the perfect location for their nuptials.

Alex Pelling, 31, and Lisa Gant, 29, held their sixth wedding at the Vancouver International Airport with Live@YVR winner Jaeger Mah hosting the ceremony. Since Mah is known for his colourful Hawaiian shirts, the couple decided to have a Hawaiian-themed wedding.

Pelling wore one of Mah’s famous shirts. They played music from Mah’s radio as Gant walked down the makeshift aisle and female passengers tried to catch Gant’s bouquet, which was purchased from an airport flower shop.

“The idea is that we’ll travel around the world (the United States, South America and Europe) and in the end, we decide what we like the best,” Pelling said. “Then we’ll come back and have the final one. All the people we’ve met along the way are all invited.”

The couple left their home 10 weeks ago and are planning 30 wedding ceremonies during their trip. They’ve held weddings on a beach at Neck Point in Nanaimo, where a First Nations elder blessed the ceremony, and on horseback while in Banff, and they plan to do another one in Hawaii.

Pelling said he sold his car repair shop and they both lived like hermits the past three years to pay for the wedding tour.

Answers sought in riot aftermath

All eyes are on Vancouver as an independent review into the outbreak and response of June's Stanley Cup riots is released.

Co-chairs Douglas J. Keefe and former VANOC CEO John Furlong will present the report's findings today. Among the topics under scrutiny will be the preparedness of Vancouver police and firefighters to respond when violence broke out after the Canucks' Game 7 defeat, and the lack of criminal convictions pursuant to the incident.

"What I hope for is a comprehensive review ... and recommendations on how to anticipate and avoid these situations in the future," said Vancouver Coun. Geoff Meggs.

Private property and vehicles were among the items targeted resulting in millions of dollars in damage to the downtown core.

Mayor Gregor Robertson, who called the events of June 15 "embarrassing and shameful" and blamed a the acts on a minority of "bad seeds," has declined to comment on the report's possible conclusions.

Foot detached 'naturally'

Eighth foot found on or near B.C. coast since August 2007 Autopsy shows no evidence of foul play

PHYLICIA TORREVILLAS
@METRONEWS.CA

The human leg and foot found washed up in False Creek Tuesday detached naturally, the provincial coroners service announced yesterday.

Coroner Steve Fonseca said they are waiting for DNA results to be tested and matched with missing persons records to know the identity or sex of the person.

The autopsy also revealed that there was no evidence of foul play, he added.

"We believe, based on some of the features that were present in the autopsy, this is somebody who may have died weeks or months (ago) … and the (lower leg and foot) have become naturally disarticulated (at the knee)," Fonseca said.

"We believe, based on some of the features that were present in the autopsy, this is somebody who may have died weeks or months (ago)."
STEVE FONSECA, B.C. CORONERS

He added the size nine B.U.M. Equipment running shoe from the Sidney Crosby line probably floated the remains to the surface.

The B.C. Coroners Service has so far confirmed the identities of four of the previous seven feet that turned up on or near the coastline of B.C. since 2007.

▶ Susan Lambert, president of the B.C. Teachers' Federation, announces the union has filed strike notice yesterday.

B.C. teachers poised to strike

Teach-only strategy ◐ They won't write report cards

PHYLICIA TORREVILLAS
@METRONEWS.CA

British Columbia's 41,000 teachers filed strike notice yesterday, with job action taking effect on the first day of classes.

Susan Lambert, president of the B.C. Teachers' Federation (BCTF), said Phase 1 of their job action means teachers will not be performing administrative tasks.

These include filling out forms, meeting with principals or administrators, supervising on playgrounds, and writing report cards.

The BCTF members have been without a collective agreement since June. There has been no significant progress in negotiations with the B.C. Public School Employers' Association (BCPSEA). Ninety per cent of teachers voted in favour of a provincewide strike.

"Phase one is very precisely designed to put pressure on administration, on our employers... without affecting students and parents."

"What (the) government has done in this round of bargaining is come to the table with a mandate that's simply a refusal to bargain," Lambert claimed, adding public education is the most critical service of government.

"It ensures the next generation of citizens is more productive … less a burden on social services," she added.

"It's a prudent economic investment … much more prudent than a retractable roof on B.C. Place."

The teachers' union is pushing for salary and benefit improvements, but this is complicated by the government's "net-zero" mandate, meaning there can't be an increase in total compensation costs for public-sector wages.

A surreal conversation with Michael J. Fox

CHARLIE RIEDEL/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

▶ Vancouver-born Michael J. Fox "dove right into" a conversation with contest-winner April.

If you could have a conversation with anyone, who would it be?

For Calgary native April Taylor, it was Michael J. Fox.

Unlike most people, though, Taylor had the conversation of her dreams yesterday with the Vancouver-born advocate, actor and author after winning the Wind Mobile Best Conversation Ever Competition.

She's still shaking from the experience.

"(The conversation) exceeded my expectations for sure," said Taylor.

"Michael J. Fox was so personable. He dove right into it and seemed so interested in my life and what I had to say."

Growing up admiring Fox, Taylor said this 15-minute experience was surreal.

What secured her spot as a finalist were promises she'd donate 50 cents to the Michael J. Fox Foundation for every vote she received in the contest.

"I wanted people to take an interest and know about the Michael J. Fox Foundation," said Taylor. "Whether I won or not, I was going to donate."

Taylor was one of five Canadians who got the opportunity to speak to their heroes and have the cell-service provider make a $100,000 donation to their charity of choice.

Heed fined, but keeps job over flyers

Former B.C. solicitor general Kash Heed will be fined at least $8,000 for spending more than he was allowed during the 2009 provincial election campaign.

Heed was twice forced to step down from his cabinet post after allegations surfaced that his campaign distributed flyers that weren't reported to Elections BC. The provincial election agency conducted an audit and determined that, with the flyers included, Heed spent about $74,000 — exceeding the spending limit of $70,000.

The fine for overspending is double the amount that a candidate exceeded the limit by.

▶ Grace Tan thanks Nicholas Fok, 57, for his generous blood donation.

Three years ago, Vancouver resident Grace Tan was rushed to the emergency room at Vancouver General Hospital after a motorcycle crash, and is alive today because of four units of donated life-saving blood.

Still recovering from her extensive and long-lasting injuries, Tan showed her appreciation yesterday at the Oak Street blood donor clinic, thanking donors for their gift of blood and raising awareness of the importance of donating.

"Accidents, they happen so fast and in the blink of an eye, and you don't know when you're going to need blood," said Tan. "I urge everybody to donate."

There are many different situations your blood could be of use, explains Ariella Eini, partnership specialist with Canadian Blood Services, such as for premature babies, burn victims, extreme traumas, or in ongoing treatments.

Leukemia treatments, for instance, can use up to eight units of blood per week, each unit being given by one donor.

"It's not an endless supply in the hospitals," said Tan. "It's nice to know that the blood is there, but it comes from somewhere. It comes from us."

There are still 250 open appointment spots at the Oak Street blood donor clinic over the Labour Day long weekend, and Canadian Blood Services is urging everyone who can to donate blood for those in need during their latest campaign.

"It's nice to know that the blood is there, but it comes from somewhere. It comes from us."

Mountie given court date

The case of a Kelowna, B.C. Mountie caught kicking a man in the head is expected to go to trial next November.

Const. Geoff Mantler was videotaped assaulting Buddy Tavares after ordering him to the ground during an arrest in January 2010.

More than 50 witnesses are expected to be called during the trial, which could last three weeks.

Tavares has filed a civil lawsuit in which he accused Mantler, the B.C. government, the City of Kelowna and an unnamed female officer of negligence and malicious misconduct.

The suit claims Tavares suffered a broken nose and injuries to his mouth, teeth and brain.

Irene storm victims remain stranded, without electricity

- Relief crews work to reach isolated residents
- Hurricane causes around $7 billion in damage

Floodwaters ravaged parts of New Jersey and Connecticut and nearly 2 million remained without power as people stranded by flooded roads in Vermont received provisions dropped in by air for a second day, yesterday.

Two of the three nuclear reactors in a southern New Jersey county have powered partway down because debris from hurricane Irene is blocking cooling water intakes.

"Sunday morning, the water was only up to here," said Wallington, N.J., resident Kevin O'Reilly, gesturing to where his front lawn used to meet the sidewalk. "Sunday afternoon, the waves were bouncing off the house, and that's when it blew out the basement windows."

The storm took at least eight lives in the Caribbean before hitting the continental United States, where it has been blamed for at least 45 deaths in 13 states.

Denise Ruzicka, director of inland water resources for Connecticut's Department of Energy and Environmental Protection, said flood control dams and basins that New England states installed after 1955 floods helped prevent a catastrophe in the lower Connecticut River basin.

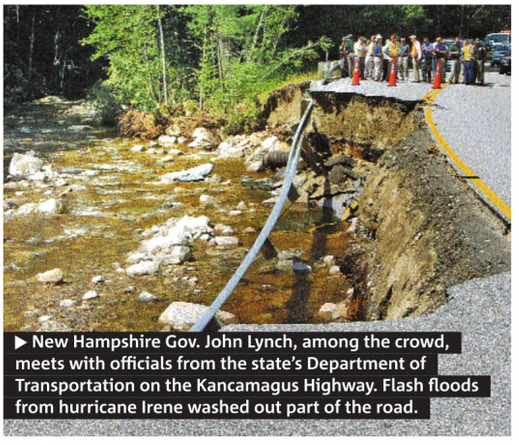
She said all the rivers in the state will be receding by the end of the day.

"The worst is over," she said.

Recovery efforts saw people moving out of emergency shelters in western Massachusetts, farmers in New York's battered Schoharie Valley assessing crop losses and an insurance agent in Pawtucket, Rhode Island, fielding dozens of calls from customers making damage claims.

"The majority of the claims are trees down," said Melanie Loiselle-Mongeon. "Trees on houses, on fences, on decks, on cars."

JIM COLE/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS



▶ New Hampshire Gov. John Lynch, among the crowd, meets with officials from the state's Department of Transportation on the Kancamagus Highway. Flash floods from hurricane Irene washed out part of the road.

Total losses from the storm along the U.S. Atlantic Coast — including damage and expenses incurred by governments — are likely to be about $7 billion, according to Jan Vermeiren, CEO of Maryland-based risk consultant Kinetic Analysis Corp.

Tropical storm grows

Tropical Storm Katia was close to becoming a hurricane yesterday in the Atlantic Ocean, but forecasters said it was too soon to determine where it might head.

The U.S. National Hurricane Center in Miami cautioned the public — still recovering along parts of the East Coast from Irene — not to stress over the storm. It is over warm waters and in a low wind shear environment, two ingredients that could propel it to become a major hurricane. But it's too soon to tell if it will ever come near land.

"It's got a lot of ocean to go. There's no way at this point to say if it will make any impacts, let alone when it might make them," said Dennis Feltgen, a meteorologist at the National Hurricane Center.

Sarkozy denies critic's dirty cash accusations

Book claims French president accepted illegal campaign cash from L'Oreal heiress in 2007
Leader of France's opposition calls for independent investigation into allegations

JACQUES BRINON/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

▶ L'Oreal cosmetics heiress Liliane Bettencourt

French President Nicolas Sarkozy's office vigorously denied claims in a new book that he personally took undeclared campaign cash from the heiress to the L'Oreal cosmetics fortune five years ago — claims that come just as the race for next year's presidential elections is heating up.

Sarkozy's allies suggested the accusations are a campaign ploy against the unpopular president. Similar accusations first surfaced last year.

Still, questions about how Sarkozy financed his 2007 campaign could stain his likely bid for re-election in April and May. Critics have long deemed the conservative leader too cosy with the rich, criticism that carries particular sting now that the French economy is stalling and many of his supporters are disillusioned with his leadership.

The leader of France's main opposition party, Socialist Martine Aubry, called for a new investigation into whether Sarkozy received illegal campaign cash from Liliane Bettencourt, Europe's richest woman.

An accountant for Bettencourt said a year ago that she gave C50,000 ($72,000 US) in cash in 2007 to Sarkozy's party treasurer for the presidential campaign — well beyond the C4,600 legal limit on individual donations. The accusations came during a series of investigations into the heiress's finances.

The book, "Sarko m'a tuer" ("Sarko Killed Me"), quotes investigating judge Isabelle Prevost-Desprez as saying a witness she questioned "told me that he or she had seen cash handed over to Sarko," a nickname used for Sarkozy.

Sarkozy's office called the claim of illegal campaign cash "scandalous, unfounded and untrue."

Government spokeswoman Valerie Pecresse said that the approaching presidential campaign should not be the occasion for all kinds of slanderous accusations.

"I think the timing is dubious," Pecresse told reporters yesterday.

Aubry, who is seeking the Socialist presidential nomination to try to unseat Sarkozy, said on BFM television yesterday, "I hope that a new investigation will be opened."

Whistle-blower law kicks in Civil servants in Saskatchewan who are concerned about wrongdoing in their workplace will no longer be able to go to the media or opposition politicians under a new law.

Known as the whistleblower protection law, the Public Interest Disclosure Act takes effect today and outlines how and where workers should report wrongdoing.

Public Service Commission Minister June Draude said it gives employees a place to go internally.

She added there are consequences if an employee doesn't use this channel.

Draude said there aren't many reports of wrongdoing in the provincial government.

There is already similar legislation in Ontario, Manitoba and Nova Scotia.

MAN CUTS OFF TOES WITH POCKET KNIFE TO ESCAPE FROM FOREST

A 61-year-old retired logger feared he might die alone in a remote forest after his right foot was pinned under his six-tonne trailer. With few choices, he used a 7.6-centimetre pocket knife to cut off all five toes to get free.

"It hurt so bad," Jon Hutt said. "I would cut for a while and then I had to rest."

Hutt then climbed into his semi tractor-trailer, his foot wrapped in a shirt, and began driving for help. Hutt's ordeal was first reported in the Grand Junction Daily Sentinel.

The wiry, 180-pound man told The Associated Press that he began cutting off his toes about 30 minutes later when he realized no one could hear his cries for help. Hutt said he couldn't reach his cellphone, which was in his truck and out of range anyway.

Hutt told his wife he would be back in several hours from a job 80 kilometres away, but he did not know when she might start searching for him.

"I cut off my boot to see my foot, and once I realized how bad it was, I started cutting off my toes," Hutt said.

Once he freed himself, Hutt stopped the bleeding with a shirt and drove toward his home outside Montrose, about 282 kilometres southwest of Denver. He called for help once he was in cellphone range. An ambulance met him on the way.

Hutt said authorities retrieved his severed toes and took them to the hospital, but doctors said the toes couldn't be re-attached because they were too badly mangled.

Instead, doctors sewed his foot shut and wrapped it in bandages. Doctors warned him he may face more surgery.

News in brief

Conflicting messages

LIBYA. Two men claiming to be Moammar Gadhafi's sons made conflicting appeals from hiding yesterday, with one of them calling for talks with rebel leaders and the other urging the regime's loyalists to fight to the death.

The duelling messages reflected the growing turmoil in Gadhafi's inner circle on the eve of the 42nd anniversary of his rise to power. This year, the dictator is a fugitive from opposition fighters who have seized most of the country.

NEW YORK. Some new government documents are offering a glimpse into a CIA program created soon after the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks.

ETHIOPIA. An Amnesty International researcher says Ethiopian officials arrested two opposition politicians after members of the rights group interviewed them about politically motivated arrests.

Strong words, warning from Iranian leader

Message directed at the West and allies making gains during Arab Spring ◐ Citizens warned not to let the U.S. dominate their country

Iran's top leader warned the Arab world yesterday not to allow Western powers and Israel to "confiscate" the region's pro-reform uprisings, in comments that appear to reflect the Islamic republic's unease about their standing in a profoundly altered Middle East.

Iran has tried to walk two paths since the pro-democracy rebellions began in February — lauding the popular revolts as modern-day heirs to Iran's 1979 Islamic revolution, while maintaining relentless pressure on opposition groups at home.

CONTRIBUTED/GETTY IMAGES

But Iran is at risk of serious political setbacks. Iran's main Mideast ally, Syria's Bashar Assad, is under growing international pressure for his fierce crackdown on anti-government protests.

Iran's Supreme Leader Ayatollah Ali Khamenei, in a speech broadcast on Iran's state TV to mark the end of the Muslim holy month of Ramadan, reflected the added worries that the West and its allies could gain ground in the Arab Spring.

"Who thought American and Zionist agents in the region would fall one after the other? This is the powerful hand of the Islamic nations."

AYATOLLAH ALI KHAMENEI

"Muslim nations in Egypt, Libya, Tunisia, Yemen or other countries need vigilance today. They should not allow enemies to confiscate the victories they've achieved," Khamenei said. "They should not forget that those who have come to the scene in Libya (U.S. and NATO) today and consider themselves owners of the uprising are the same people who used to sit and drink with those who once suppressed the Libyan nation."

In Iran's view, collapse of pro-U.S. governments in Egypt and Tunisia were strong blows to U.S. influence in the region and a new "Islamic awakening."

Sarkozy critical of U.S.

French President Nicolas Sarkozy has criticized the U.S. for elbowing Europe and others out of the way in the Middle East peace process.

Sarkozy told a gathering yesterday of France's ambassadors that while Washington is irreplaceable, "Europe doesn't have to ask for a folding chair to participate in negotiations that concern it."

He also questioned the role of the quartet — the U.S., the UN, the European Union and Russia — which have served as the traditional mediators between Israel and the Palestinians. He said that instead, more countries should be included.

Talks between the two sides have been stalled for months.

Even in death Jack boosts NDP

New poll has party tied with Tories Grits trail far behind Pollster asks: Can NDP consolidate gains?

Jack Layton's death has triggered another orange wave across the country, a new poll suggests.

The Canadian Press Harris-Decima survey pegs support for Layton's NDP at 33 per cent — tied with the ruling Conservatives and well ahead of the Liberals at 21 per cent.

That's almost a three-point gain for the New Democrats since the May 2 election, which vaulted the party into official Opposition status.

The Tories are down almost seven points, the Liberals are up two.

Harris-Decima chairman Allan Gregg said the NDP gain is most likely attributable to "the Jack effect."

Deported twice, he's back — and busted

A fugitive who was deported from Canada twice, returned and appeared on the government's most-wanted list, has been arrested in Toronto.

Public Safety Minister Vic Toews said yesterday Wasford Uriah Steer was arrested Monday.

Steer, 39, was last deported to Jamaica in 2000.

Toews said it's not known when, where or how he returned to Canada, adding he could have used a fake passport.

"He could have come in under someone else's passport and could have been here the day after he left," Toews said in Regina.

"This guy's quite creative," he added.

Toews said Toronto police picked up Steer on other charges and then found he was wanted by the Canada Border Services Agency.

The agency said Steer, who has five known aliases, is in Canada illegally after he was convicted of various crimes, including possession of counterfeit money, assault causing bodily harm and assault with a weapon.

Toews acknowledged it's tough to keep people like Steer out of the country if they use fake travel documents.

Facial recognition software might be one possibility, he suggested.

Glass ceiling is still shatterproof

Men twice as likely as women to become senior executives Same rate as two decades ago

Canadian women appear to have made little progress in breaking the glass ceiling, with the proportion of women senior managers barely changing over the last two decades, according to a report.

The study released yesterday by the Conference Board of Canada found that 32 per cent of women held senior positions in 2009, while men held 64 per cent.

And the report says things aren't much better at the middle-management level, a path that future executives generally take, where men are 1.5 times more likely to hold those positions.

The report, based on Statistics Canada data from 1987 to 2009 says the proportion of women middle managers has grown only four per cent since 1987.

"At that rate, it will take approximately 151 years before the proportion of men and women at the management level is equal," said Anne Golden, the board's president and chief executive officer.

UNIVERSITY 101: A COURSE OF MISDIRECTION

HE SAYS ...

JOHN MAZEROLLE
METRO

Another university year is beginning, so post-secondary students are about to learn important "life lessons" that will stay with them long after they've forgotten what Pi is (it's a number).

So that I might save you from the high cost of tuition, books, and 55 metric tonnes of Mr. Noodles, here they are:

Condoms are king: Welcome to university, the only organization that gets away with putting a prophylactic in its orientation kit. This would be less well received at, say, Microsoft. Nary a frosh week organizer will pass up the opportunity to offer you a free condom. "Hi, I'm the leader of the Fundamentalist Christian Fellowship," they'll say. "Would you like a Trojan?"

High school has not prepared you: Real university preparation courses would only upset parents, because they would have names like, "101 things to do with your surplus condoms" and "Beggars CAN be choosers: Getting the most from your local soup kitchen."

No one cares about you: In Grade 12, your teacher listened patiently as you explained your poor mark was because the exchange student, Olaf Gooberson, rejected your advances. In university, your professor will sympathize with you only in select circumstances, such as if you are actively dead. Even then, she'll expect a doctor's note.

Textbooks are not your friend: The average university textbook weighs more than the average student, and that weight is both physical and emotional. For many of you, this purchase will be the first time you've ever gone into a store with a big wad of money, paid for something that was still in its plastic wrap, and not felt good about it. Fortunately they're a good value because humans are genetically incapable of throwing away textbooks, which will live on as doorstops and window jams until you die.

Students are (very) amateur philosophers: Like a 10-year-old who learns a new swear word, many university students learn a few simple philosophical concepts and can't stop spouting them. For instance, you will hear "How do I know anything is real?" multiple times. If you hear anybody say that, slap them. If they complain, explain that the pain is not real, but rather a byproduct of humanity's inability to perceive time. Then hit them again. For me.

University is just another step: When I was graduating, choosing community college over university was seen by teachers as a career move only slightly better than holding up a convenience store. Between the hype and the price, university no doubt seems like the be-all and end-all. But it's not.

The important thing to remember is, no matter how you do, and no matter what happens over the next four years, you will never, ever run out of condoms, obsolete textbooks, or tired philosophical catchphrases.

Some people also collect memories and knowledge, if you're into that sort of thing.

Worth Mentioning

MARTIN LUTHER KING JR. Poet Maya Angelou says the way a quote from Martin Luther King Jr. was paraphrased on his new memorial in Washington makes the civil rights leader sound like an "arrogant twit."

Angelou, who consulted on the memorial, told The Washington Post that the shortened version sounds egotistical and should be changed.

The phrase is from a speech shortly before King's assassination in 1968 in which he talked about how people should remember him.

In the original, King starts by saying, "If you want to say that I was a drum major, say that I was a drum major for justice," King told the congregation. "Say that I was a drum major for peace. I was a drum major for righteousness. And all of the other shallow things will not matter."

All that is condensed on King's memorial as "I was a drum major for justice, peace and righteousness."

"The 'if' clause that is left out is salient. Leaving it out changes the meaning completely," Angelou told The Washington Post. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WEIRD NEWS

Dalhousie prof quits over lack of parking

Frustrated with the "ridiculous" lack of parking on campus, a Dalhousie University professor has quit his job.

Dan Middlemiss, an expert in Canadian defence policy and professor in the political science department, said he decided to leave his job of 30 years because he had to arrive on campus hours before his first class to snag a spot in oversold lots.

"It's just silly. It's been 30 years of frustration," said Middlemiss, adding he made his final decision Monday after waiting hours in line to buy a parking pass only to be told he would have to come back the next day.

He said he always had to drive from home in Lower Sackville at around 7 a.m. to secure a parking spot for his 2:30 p.m. class.

There are just 2,000 parking spaces on the Halifax campus for 17,000 students and 3,000 employees, a predicament Middlemiss called "ridiculous."

Last year, the university oversold the number of parking passes by 65 per cent. But this year it aims to oversell by only 30 per cent. At the same time, the university has turned 184 general parking spots into reserved spots. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Council drops ban on Money for Nothing

Dire Straits song now 'may be acceptable'
Radio stations free to play 1985 hit again

▶ Mark Knopfler

A Canadian broadcast watchdog says its decision to deem a 1985 Dire Straits smash unfit for radio just ain't workin'.

The Canadian Broadcast Standards Council has tempered a ruling on Money For Nothing, which includes the word "faggot," saying that while the homophobic slur in the song is inappropriate, it must be taken in context and that individual radio stations can decide what listeners want to hear.

"(The council) is only saying that there may be circumstances in which even words designating unacceptably negative portrayal may be acceptable because of their contextual usage" states the decision, released yesterday.

So, what changed since the council made its original decision?

The song's writer, Mark Knopfler, has long maintained that he was writing from the perspective of a "bonehead" whom he observed in a hardware store watching MTV, reacting with disgust to the fledgling network's flamboyant rock stars.

The council simply hadn't taken such context into account when making its original decision, said the organization's national chair Ron Cohen. But with that information in hand, the majority of the council's panel felt the word was intended satirically and not in a hateful manner.

"(The context) wasn't as evident without the explanations that have been provided," Cohen said in a telephone interview.

A musical about mental illness? And it's (darkly) funny?

That's the diagnosis for Next to Normal, the Pulitzer Prize-winning play that the New York Times described as a "feel-everything musical."

It's 733-performance, two-year Broadway run also garnered 11 Tony nominations. It won three.

And now it's kicking off the Arts Club's 2011-12 season.

"I saw the Broadway production and was struck by the immediacy of it — the rock quality in the music helps to establish the currency of the issues," says AC's artistic managing director Bill Millerd.

"This show is unique — it reminds us that there is no normal in what musicals can present in their stories and style."

Developed over a decade by composer Tom Kitt and writer Brian Yorkey, the play examines a family struggling to overcome the effects of mental illness and its treatment.

"You wouldn't think this would be a subject for a Broadway musical," says Millerd. "However, (the play) tackles the subject in the context of the family dynamic with forcefulness, no sugar-coating the situation, but using the sonorities of rock music to guess us though the heartfelt journey."

Next to Normal, starring Warren Kimmel, Eric Morin, Caitriona Murphy, Jennie Neumann, Matt Palmer and Colin Sheen, opens at the Stanley Industrial Alliance Stage Sept. 8 and runs until Oct. 9. Tickets are $29 to $65, inclusive of taxes and fees. Visit artsclub.com for more information.

News in brief

New Kids on the Block member Jordan Knight will be one of the judges on the new CBC-TV reality show Cover Me Canada. The competition features musical acts performing classic Canadian songs. Joining Knight on the judging panel will be singer Deborah Cox and music exec Ron Fair. The show, to be hosted by former All Saints member Nicole Appleton, begins Sept. 18 at 9 p.m. A group of eight finalists will compete for a $100,000 cash prize and a recording contract to have their first original single released by Universal Music Canada. Knight and the New Kids have been touring over the summer with the Backstreet Boys.

Fright Night stars bummed over poor U.S. showing, hope for European success

Despite suicide, Bravo going ahead with Housewives premiere

EVAN AGOSTINI/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Bravo network said yesterday it is going ahead with the Labour Day season premiere of The Real Housewives of Beverly Hills despite the suicide of a cast member's husband.

Brief interviews with cast members about the suicide of Russell Armstrong will precede the premiere, although Armstrong's widow, Taylor — one of the Real Housewives — did not participate. The network will also air several suicide prevention public service announcements during the show, said Frances Berwick, Bravo Media president.

Armstrong hanged himself on Aug. 15. He left no note.

The couple's marital strife was a story line in the reality show's first season.

In the second season premiere, filmed months ago, Taylor Armstrong tells the other housewives that she and her husband are going to therapy.

Berwick said the season's new episodes are in the process of being edited.

She didn't specify exactly what was being done, but it will likely be to give less attention to the marital problems.

"Our thoughts continue to be with the Armstrong family during this difficult time," Berwick said in a statement.

The Real Housewives franchise is one of the key factors in Bravo's success as a cable network.

Viewers, chew on this

ABC replaces soaps with The Chew, a show full of fun and easy living tips

Gnaw on this: Can some of food and style TV's biggest stars, Mario Batali and Clinton Kelly among them, help ABC soap fans get over the cancellation of their favourite stories?

The network's counting on it for The Chew.

Iron Chef or Martha Stewart this isn't. Nor will the five co-hosts take on top news of the day like their cousins over at The View once the show premieres live on Sept. 26 in place of All My Children and One Life to Live. What you'll see is simple, fun tips for cheap and easy living.

During a recent practice run, the ever-adorable Iron Chef Michael Symon salted skirt steak as he shared about his Greek-Sicilian mother and made it clear: Vinaigrette is two parts fat to one part acid.

Kelly, co-host of TLC's What Not to Wear, urged parents to bring their kids back to the dinner table by letting them draw on butcher block paper for placemats.

If it sounds like stuff the more sophisticated Stewart might have thought up in kindergarten, you're right, but that's OK with Chew's executive producer, Gordon Elliott.

He's going for "easily digestible, pardon the pun."

Elliott explains: "People don't have time to sit for an hour and watch a story. ABC came to me and said we've had great success with The View but we'd like to get into food. I thought The View, food, The Chew."

"I really don't believe that disgruntled refugees from All My Children and One Life to Live will swallow The Chew," said TV analyst Shari Anne Brill.

A love rekindling for Biel and Timberlake?

Former flames spotted dining and enjoying a leisurely bike ride in Toronto

ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

▶ Rumours are stirring that Timberlake and Biel may not be over for good.

Jessica Biel and Justin Timberlake put an end to their relationship back in March, but now there's speculation that their breakup might not stick, according to Hollyscoop.

Biel and Timberlake were spotted recently sharing brunch and a leisurely bike ride in Toronto, where Biel is currently filming.

"They were in good spirits," an eyewitness says. "They seemed happy. They had brunch together. They were talking. They enjoyed their food. They had a nice time."

But even if the pair are rekindling their flame, don't expect Timberlake to get too talkative about it.

"In my 30 years, she is the most special person," he told Vanity Fair in June.

"I don't want to say much more, because I have to protect things that are dear to me — for instance, her."

Easy tips to shape up this season

Canadian fashion blog The Coveteur is taking a peek into the dressers, drawers, closets and safes of ladies and gents in the frontline of the fashion industry

Site brings style savvy out of the closet

A moniker marrying the words "covet" and "voyeur" seems fitting for a site offering glimpses into people's closets, but there's much more to homegrown fashion blog The Coveteur than a series of random snapshots.

The Canadian trio behind the buzzworthy blog is keen on capturing intimate portraits of personal style within a cosy, familiar environment typically beyond the glare of the spotlight.

Since launching this year, The Coveteur has won fans with its photographic profiles of the stylish private spaces of notable names, as well as those working behind the scenes in the fashion world.

"I think people are all voyeurs. Everyone wants behind-the-scenes access," said designer Erin Kleinberg, one of the founders.

"People are visual and they want to see imagery, and they want to see exclusive content, for sure."

Street style was a huge influence for Kleinberg and stylist Stephanie Mark, but both wanted to take the concept one step further.

Rather than strictly chronicling what people were wearing, they came up with the idea of adopting a more personal approach: going into individuals' homes to peruse and capture snapshots of the clothes, accessories and prized keepsakes adorning their closets.

"Once we started shooting, the element of environment really came into play then," Mark said. "We realized the environment was just as much about a person as their clothing... they kind of really complement each other."

▶ Stephanie Mark, left, says she and her Coveteur collaborators love profiling celebrities, but feel it's also important for them to focus on others within the industry such as make-up artists and hairstylists, who usually don't receive the same level of recognition.

JACK ROSENBERG/THECANADIANPRESS

Rounding out the Toronto trio is photographer Jake Rosenberg. The team had previously collaborated on one of Kleinberg's lookbooks shot by Rosenberg and styled by Mark.

For someone accustomed to shooting fashion on figures, Rosenberg said the notion of capturing images of closets was an entirely new concept.

In certain cases, the process turned out to be a revelation of sorts for the subjects themselves, he noted.

"A lot of people say after we've gone through their closet, 'Oh my God, I totally forgot that I had all this stuff in there,'" Rosenberg said.

"It's always a fresh approach every single time we shoot because the space is totally different and the product is different," he added. "Every single time it tells a unique story and it works out great."

The Coveteur has embarked on a special collaboration with luxury retailer Holt Renfrew, including a lookbook showcasing fall designer footwear, a photo exhibit featuring the closets of resident tastemakers, and dedicated window installations at locations across the country.

Designer Jonathan Adler, Canadian philanthropist and style maven Suzanne Rogers and actress Kiernan Shipka (Sally Draper on Mad Men) are among those who have opened their homes — and closets — for The Coveteur treatment, which is featured online.

The Louboutin-filled shelves of reality star Khloe Kardashian were among the shots and profiles captured by The Coveteur team as part of another collaboration with Elle Magazine.

The site stats

Wondering how thecoveteur.com came to be?

- The Coveteur netted 20,000 hits the day it launched in January, and what initially started off as a fun passion project has evolved into a full-time commitment that sometimes involves travel to locations such as New York and Los Angeles.
- The site also features e-commerce, allowing users scrolling through the various images to shop the look they see featured in the closets.
- All of their subjects get to see the photos before they're posted and if individuals aren't comfortable, the images don't go up, said Mark.

The boys behind Canadian couture line Greta Constantine team up with leather garment all-star Danier

Kirk Pickersgill and Stephen Wong already have their hands full crafting luxurious ready-to-wear for women as well as a separate line devoted to men's looks.

But when Danier came calling, the Toronto-based design duo behind Greta Constantine couldn't pass up the opportunity of a homegrown collaboration with the leather goods retailer – not to mention putting their stamp on another apparel line.

"We met with them and discussed the possibilities," said Wong in a recent interview at a Danier location in Toronto's Yorkdale Shopping Centre.

"And we came up with this approach to taking a similar approach to what we have with our Greta Constantine label, which is this kind of ease and effortlessness, and adapted it to leather."

Dubbed "jersey boys" for their embrace and use of the fluid knit fabric, Pickersgill and Wong have earned their share of attention within style circles for their broad range of offerings over the years, from sleek outerwear to draped, Grecian-inspired garments. The Greta Constantine label name comes from the combination of Wong's mother's name and Pickersgill's grandfather's name.

Warm Salad of Grilled Chicken Thighs, Figs & Parmigiano-Reggiano upgrades side dishes

ALL PHOTOS: MATTHEW MEAD THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

▶ This recipe serves four.

Skinless chicken breasts have become the new cottage cheese — the ubiquitous base upon which weight-loss diets are built.

But it still doesn't register well on the excitement meter. That's where chicken thighs come in. Sure, they aren't as low in fat, but being skinless and by trimming all visible fat they become fairly low in fat and they're flavourful.

Salad of Grilled Chicken Thighs, Figs & Parmigiano-Reggiano

Preparation:

1. In a large bowl, combine half each of the vinegar and rosemary. Season with salt and pepper. Add chicken and toss to coat. Cover and marinate at room temperature for 15 minutes or in refrigerator for up to 4 hours, turning chicken occasionally.
2. Place onions in a large bowl and add remaining red wine vinegar and a pinch of salt. Mix and set aside for 15 minutes to 1 hour, tossing occasionally.
3. Heat a grill or grill pan to medium-low. Place chicken thighs on grill and cook for 15 to 20 minutes or until nicely browned and cooked through, turning chicken halfway through grilling. Transfer chicken to a plate and sprinkle with basil. Set aside.
4. Add arugula, figs and remaining rosemary to onions and vinegar. Gently toss salad, then season with salt and pepper. Divide salad among 4 serving plates. Place chicken thigh halves around salad, then sprinkle salads with shaved Parmigiano-Reggiano.

Ingredients:

- 60 ml (4 tbsp) red wine vinegar, divided
- 10 ml (2 tsp) chopped fresh rosemary, divided
- Salt and ground black pepper
- 8 bone-in, skinless chicken thighs, each cut into 2 pieces each (1 to 1.15 kg/ to 2 to 2 1/2 lb total)
- 125 ml (1/2 cup) thinly sliced red onion
- 5 ml (1 tsp) chopped fresh basil
- 2 ripe fresh figs, cut lengthwise into quarters
- 2 l (8 cups) loosely packed fresh arugula
- 30 g (1 oz) Parmigiano-Reggiano cheese, shaved

Pospisil keeps Canada's U.S. Open hopes alive

Vasek Pospisil is starting to feel like he belongs among the world's top tennis players.

The native of Vernon won the first Grand Slam match of his career yesterday by crushing Lukas Rosol 6-1, 6-2, 6-1 to reach the second round of the U.S. Open.

Pospisil needed just 82 minutes to dispatch the Czech after converting on seven of 13 break point chances.

"This is my second slam, so I'm still new to the scene," he said. "It takes a little bit of getting comfortable with these guys.

"In the past maybe it wasn't like that for me. But that is changing fast. I feel like I belong out there."

He'll face No. 25 seed Feliciano Lopez in the second round. The Spaniard was a quarter-finalist at Wimbledon in July.

"He will be tough, they're all tough at this level," said Pospisil, who is ranked 143rd in the world. "But I've been playing well for the last couple of months so I'm looking forward to it. I'm confident."

The 21-year-old is coming off a win over Argentine Juan Chela at the Rogers Cup earlier this month. He exited the Montreal tournament with a second-round loss to Roger Federer. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Venus out

Venus Williams says she has been diagnosed with an autoimmune disease that causes fatigue and joint pain and forced her to withdraw from the U.S. Open.

The seven-time major champion said in a statement that she was recently diagnosed with Sjogren's Syndrome, "an ongoing medical condition that affects my energy level and causes fatigue and joint pain." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

'We've lost a lot in the last three months'

NHL left reeling after Wade Belak found dead, the third player to die since May League had already lost Derek Boogaard and Rick Rypien

The NHL's summer of sadness continued yesterday after recently retired player Wade Belak was found dead in Toronto, becoming the third enforcer to die in a harrowing span of four months. He was 35.

Belak's body was discovered at a downtown Toronto hotel and condo complex in the early afternoon. Specific details of his death were not immediately available.

The news struck a tragic chord around the hockey world, especially after the recent deaths of New York Rangers forward Derek Boogaard and Winnipeg Jets forward Rick Rypien.

"As everyone knows there have been some real losses that we've experienced over the years, but it never seemed like there was three in a row like this," said Pat Quinn, who coached Belak when he played in Toronto. "Anybody that's around this game, you feel like it's part of your big family, and that includes the fans and all the people that support these players and get to know them. We've lost a lot in the last three months.

"You don't replace it. You just hope the ones that are left behind can live through it and be all right."

Like Rypien and Boogaard, Belak largely made his living with his fists. He fought 136 times during an NHL career that spanned 14 seasons, according to hockeyfights.com.

The string of incidents has raised uncomfortable questions about a possible link between the difficult role each man played in the NHL and his untimely death.

"We're talking about such a short period of time," said Craig Button, who was the general manager of the Calgary Flames when Belak played there early in his career. "It's not only about the deaths, it's the deaths that surround similar type players. ...

"It's not just getting hit in the head, it's everything that goes with that (enforcer) role."

Belak was popular among the media off the ice because of his friendly, easy-going demeanour.

He spent parts of three seasons with the Predators prior to retiring over the summer. Belak was scheduled to work on Nashville's television broadcasts this coming year and had recently travelled to Toronto to be a contestant on the CBC show "Battle of the Blades." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Hargreaves headed to Manchester City

MICHAEL REGAN/GETTY IMAGES

▶ Owen Hargreaves

Manchester City made Owen Hargreaves the most unexpected signing of the summer transfer window when the injury-plagued midfielder joined on a one-year deal.

The Canadian-born Hargreaves was released by English champion Manchester United at the end of last season after failing to complete a match in three years because of knee, shoulder and hamstring trouble.

However, the 30-year-old former England midfielder has proved his fitness to City, where he will likely be a backup to Netherlands international Nigel de Jong in the big-spending club's star-studded squad.

Hargreaves, who was born in Calgary, is City manager Roberto Mancini's sixth summer signing — and could be a shrewd one if he manages to avoid any more injuries that have derailed a career that peaked during the 2006 World Cup when he was arguably England's best performer in Germany.
